Yes, Clannad can be seen at: And also: Or try these links: Well done guys, now I can't see the lyrics and the background music while watching Clannad in English. I would really appreciate it if you could either help me find the English DVD version on Clannad or a good quality video to view the Clannad English version.Q: Why is it not possible to place my cursor at the end of a const char* string literal? This code fails with: error: 'pos' was not declared in this scope #include char *foo() { return "hello world"; } int main(int argc, char *argv[]) { printf("%s", foo()); return 0; I'm using gcc (Debian 7.2.0-5) 7.2.0 on Ubuntu 16.04.

It seems that the source code is using a constant pointer to the string literal. What is the reason for not allowing the pointer to point to the end of the string literal? A: That is a bug in the compiler. It should not make any difference. It's possible for the compiler to detect that the pointer is initialized with the literal and make the language specifications for a const-correct constant character pointer. 21.7.1.1 The char type 1 A char shall have the same representation and alignment requirements as an unsigned char. 21.7.1.2 Character constants 4 A character constant is either an ordinary character literal or a wide-character literal that begins with the first 82157476af
